

BARNABAS

Paul

Luke

Mark

Barnabas

Four men who were devoted to Jesus and committed to the task of bringing His Word and Life to the pagan world.

The lives of these pillars of the early church were entwined by their mutual faith, but also by events that starkly reveal their humanity. These four men did far more to bring Jesus to the world, than all the other apostles combined. This story is, in part, based on Luke's own account of the extraordinary time that these men, through whom God conveyed the greater part of the New Testament, were all together in Rome.
